RE: Section 301: China's Acts, Policies, and Practices Related to Technology Transfer, Intellectual Property, and Innovation (Docket USTR-2018-0026)

Dear Ambassador Lighthizer,

On behalf of the National Retail Federation, we are submitting these comments on behalf of our members in response to the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative's (USTR) request for public comment concerning proposed tariffs of 10-25 percent, to be applied to selected products (List 3) in response to "Section 301: China's Acts, Policies, and Practices Related to Technology Transfer, Intellectual Property, and Innovation."<sup>1</sup>

NRF is the world's largest retail trade association, representing discount and department stores, home goods and specialty stores, Main Street merchants, grocers, wholesalers, chain restaurants and Internet retailers from the United States and more than 45 countries. Retail is the nation's largest private sector employer, supporting one in four U.S. jobs – 42 million working Americans. Contributing $2.6 trillion to annual GDP, retail is a daily barometer for the nation's economy.

USTR is seeking comments about whether specific products on the proposed List 3 should be retained or removed, or whether other products should be added; whether the proposed tariff level should be increased to 25 percent; and what amount of total trade is appropriate to be covered by additional duties. More specifically, USTR is seeking comments on whether imposing increased duties would be effective in eliminating the Chinese practices that are the subject of the Section 301 investigation, and whether imposing the duties would cause disproportionate economic harm to U.S. interests, including small- or medium-sized businesses and consumers.

NRF strongly opposes any efforts to include or add consumer products to the list of products subject to additional tariffs, be they 10 percent or 25 percent. The list of products for the proposed 10-25 percent tariffs includes many consumer goods. They include a range of food products (fish, vegetables, nuts, fruit, grains, flours, other products like soy sauce); beverages; personal care products (make up to shampoos); detergents; motor vehicles, motorcycles and bicycles; travel goods, handbags and other bags; leather apparel; paper office supplies; hats; hand tools; furniture; lighting and mirrors; monitors; paper tablecloths, napkins, plates and cups, toilet and tissue paper, dog leashes, home air conditioners, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, calculators, baby products and many others. These are products purchased by nearly every American household. Many are staples, and account for relatively large shares of total household spending of lower-income households (food, beverages, personal care products, appliances, for example).

We do not recommend that any products be added to the proposed list, or that the proposed tariff rate be increased in any way, or that the level of trade affected be expanded.

NRF cannot speak to the question about whether the products and the tariff chosen will motivate China to change its practices, but we can and do know how China will respond to the imposition of tariffs. Based on history and current statements from Chinese government officials, all indications are that China will continue to retaliate against U.S. exports and investors, either directly with new tariffs on U.S. exports, or indirectly in a variety of ways which it has already started to employ (delays in investment approvals, failure to approve U.S. company mergers, hold-ups of agricultural products at ports until they are no longer salable, even perhaps further changes to the value of the yuan).

We also know the impact that the proposed tariffs will have on U.S. retailers and their customers: higher prices, product unavailability, even shortages – just as we enter the Holiday selling season. For example, NRF commissioned a study to examine the potential impact of the proposed tariffs on imports of furniture and travel goods from China, two key products for American families. The study (attached in Appendix E) found that the proposed furniture tariffs could force consumers to spend as much $4.6 billion more than they otherwise would spend on those products, and another $1.2 billion for travel goods. This is not insignificant, especially when you consider that these are products purchased by households at all income levels, including those that will struggle to afford the higher costs.

One overriding comment we must make at the outset: the threat that these tariffs could be imposed, and even expanded to include all consumer goods imported from China, has already started a scramble among importers to find alternative sources of supply, including in the United States. While the Administration may think this is a good way to exert pressure on China, it is coming at a very high domestic cost. This scramble for alternative sources of supply is bidding up prices for these goods already from all possible alternative manufacturers. So higher prices, no matter the outcome of this investigation or the products selected for coverage, are already on the horizon for American families. Just as steel and aluminum consuming manufacturers immediately – indeed, even before the imposition of the steel and aluminum tariffs – were hit with price increases of U.S.-made steel, and subsequently with prices increases of imports, so too are U.S. retailers already facing higher prices for consumer goods threatened with new U.S. tariffs, no matter where they are made.

NRF's comments in this submission focus on USTR's request for information about the economic impact the proposed tariffs on U.S. consumers.

A. USTR Should Exclude Products for Which Alternative Sources of Supply Are Not Available

The negative impacts on consumers of the proposed tariffs on consumer products imported from China would be significant. Even a tariff at the seemingly low rate of 10 percent (compared to 25 percent) will have a negative impact on consumers for products that are price sensitive. To avoid price increases, retailers would need to seek out alternative cost-comparable sources of supply, and very quickly. However, for many products on the proposed tariff list, China is the sole source of U.S. imports. No alternative sources are available for these products, at least in the shorter term (one to three years), and the full amount of the tariff would need to be passed on to consumers in the form of price increases. Therefore, these products should be excluded from the tariff list. Appendix A provides the Harmonized Tariff System (HTS) codes of products of particular interest to retailers (either directly because we sell them to our customers or indirectly because we use them in the course of business) for which China currently accounts for 100 percent of U.S. imports. We request that each of these products be exempted from tariffs.

Similarly, products for which China is the primary source of U.S. imports – i.e., imports from China account for 50 percent or more of total U.S. imports of that product – would also be extremely difficult if not impossible for retailers to source from other cost-competitive suppliers (including U.S. suppliers) quickly, at the required quantities or at comparable price points. For these products as well, the impact of the new tariffs would need to be passed along to consumers. We provide a list of those items and their HTS numbers in Appendix B. We request that these products be deleted from the list; items highlighted in yellow are particular priorities for retailers.

B. USTR Should Exclude Other Products

Finally, there are other products on the proposed list that retailers and their customers currently source from China, and which the imposition of tariffs would cost retailers, or their customers inordinate price increases for a variety of reasons. In other instances, tariffs would jeopardize U.S. jobs. This would result even though China is not a large source of the imports. In some instances, it may appear that there are ready sources of supply other than China; however, in reality these sources are much higher cost than China and not realistic alternatives. These products are listed in Appendix C.

The goods in Appendix C are sourced from China for a variety of reasons, including quality, production scale capabilities, and unavailability of realistic alternative sources of supply in the short term. As discussed in our previous submissions, it is not as simple as some may think for retailers to quickly change their supply chains. So even though it does appear that there are a range of alternative sources of supply, in many cases it will take too long to move sourcing for the tariffs to have no impact on U.S. interests. Again, here is a summary of what is involved:

1. Sourcing decisions typically are made months ahead of delivery

Retailers are making their purchasing decisions anywhere from six to nine to 12 months in advance. So, making changes today to reflect the imposition of new tariffs would not be possible to affect those deliveries – i.e., to find lower cost alternatives. Those goods, already ordered, will have to bear the added costs of the tariffs. For example, paper gift bags, journals, and gift wrap are imported under HTS items in Appendix C (4819 and 4820) because they are imported from China with the price pre-printed on the items, and thus it cannot be changed on goods already ordered. It will take months to manufacture new paper products with higher prices reflective of the tariffs; in the interim, the cost impact of tariffs applied to these high-volume imports will fall squarely on retailers who sell them.

2. Finding new vendors in other countries can take years for most retailers

There are a lot of steps involved in finding new vendors. Our members need to verify that new partners can produce the volume of products that are needed at the right quality for a price point the consumer is willing to pay. These vendor verifications also include a review to ensure that new (and existing) vendors meet all of the retailer's codes of conduct – everything from corporate social responsibility, labor, environment and security requirements. This also includes all required testing to ensure that products meet all of the appropriate product safety requirements. For example, one of our retailers sells herbicides made with an ingredient (part of HTS 2931.90.90, in Appendix B) that is only available from China. Significantly, the company that manufactures the herbicides from this input can only get it from manufacturers that have registered their plants with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and have submitted various test and quality reports to qualify as a source in compliance with EPA-issued technical registration. No U.S. source can make this ingredient, and no plants outside China have met the EPA criteria. Another example are products for children, many of which are regulated by the Consumer Product Safety Commission and the National Highway Transportation Safety Administration. Existing suppliers have met requirements for testing and certification; new suppliers would need to meet these requirements and that takes time.

3. Shifting to new countries in concert with hundreds of other buyers presents still more challenges

This is particularly relevant to changes in sources for travel goods. It would be impossible for all of the market participants in our industry currently sourcing travel goods from China to simultaneously move that sourcing to other countries, many of which have immature factory bases which are already struggling to meet current demand.

Thus, in the short term, retailers would be forced to continue to use Chinese suppliers, and absorb or pass on substantially higher costs to our customers – just in time for the Holiday shopping season. It might be years before suppliers in other territories were able to adequately meet U.S. demand for these popular products from such a large number of U.S. retailers, and bring sourcing volumes back up to current levels. The uncertainty that would result from these tariffs during this period could easily lead to a tightening of financing opportunities for retailers and, ultimately, put some who cannot pass on the price increases or absorb them internally out of business.

4. Tariffs on inputs to production of consumer goods could cost U.S. jobs

Sometimes, retailers are also U.S. manufacturers, and increasing the costs of inputs to U.S. production jeopardizes those U.S. operations and jobs. Some retailers import fabric, leather and furniture parts (items in HTS chapters 51-50 and 94 in Appendix C) to make furniture in the United States; others import lighting components to assemble branded lighting fixtures, also in the United States. Higher costs on inputs to this production will necessitate either seeking out alternative suppliers or shutting down the U.S. production if it cannot be continued in a cost-effective manner. U.S. jobs are at stake, in one case 800 in North Carolina and California, and in another, 125 in Oregon.

Moreover, in some cases tariff-induced increases in input costs could make the consumer good, manufactured in the United States from parts or raw materials imported from China, too expensive relative to imported consumer goods, forcing retailers to shift sourcing from U.S. suppliers to foreign suppliers of the finished products not impacted by the tariffs. This could well happen if tariffs are applied to imports of feathers in HTS 0505.10.10, for example (an item listed in Appendix B), making the cost increase for U.S.-made pillows and comforters incorporating those feathers too high to compete with imported finished bedding products. It would also affect purchases of children's bicycles assembled in the United States from parts and components imported from China.

C. Requested Action

Because of their significant adverse impacts on U.S. consumers, NRF respectfully requests that all of the products on the lists included in Appendix A, B and C be removed from the list of products proposed for 10 percent or 25 percent U.S. tariffs. [We have also included a full list of all of the HTS numbers of concern in Appendix D.] Indeed, it is imperative that tariffs not be imposed, and especially at this time, in order to secure supply to ensure our customers can enjoy the Holidays free of the burdens of new taxes.

We also respectfully request that the Administration refrain from adding any new consumer goods to the proposed list to take the place of goods that are removed from it. Items highlighted in yellow are priorities for NRF members.

NRF respectfully requests that the Administration reconsider altogether the tariff approach to incentivizing China to modify its acts, policies and practices affecting U.S. intellectual property rights and investment barriers. The collateral damage to wide swaths of the U.S. economy would not be insignificant. The U.S. tariffs in addition to the retaliation from China are already having a negative impact on the economy. This will only get worse as the tariffs and retaliation escalate.

NRF has previously noted its support of the conclusion by USTR through the Section 301 investigation that China maintains acts, policies and practices that infringe on U.S. intellectual property rights, that require or pressure U.S. companies seeking to maintain operations in China to transfer innovative technologies and intellectual property to Chinese companies, among other related practices.<sup>2</sup> Unfortunately, past promises by China to change many of these practices have been unfulfilled.

The Administration's effort to impose tariffs on imports from China as a tool to "motivate" China to implement the changes to its practices have not worked, as USTR notes in its Federal Register notice. However, increasing the level of imports subject to tariffs will not accomplish that aim, either. We agree with Ways and Means Committee Chairman Kevin Brady (R-TX): only a face to face meeting between President Trump and President Xi is likely to result in an effective agreement to level the playing field between China and the United States.<sup>3</sup> The imposition of tariffs, including and most especially on the proposed list of $200 billion in additional imports from China, will hurt the U.S. economy and American families more than China, and should not be used as a tool to bring about change to China's practices.

Conclusion

We thank the Administration for the opportunity to testify on this important issue. We look forward to continuing the discussion on how best to address China's unfair trade practices in a manner that focuses on the specific issues without harming U.S. businesses, worker or consumers.

Sincerely,

David French

Estimated Impacts of Proposed Tariffs on Imports from China: Furniture and Travel Goods

The Trump administration has proposed tariffs of at least 10 percent on $200 billion in goods imported from China, and has said the tariffs might be as high as 25 percent. A number of the products targeted fall into two categories important to U.S. consumers: furniture and travel goods such as luggage. We assess the impacts of the proposed tariffs on these products, in particular on consumer prices.

The proposed tariffs, especially at 25 percent, would be too large for U.S. retailers to absorb and, if passed on, would result in prices higher than many consumers would be willing to pay, therefore forcing U.S. retailers to shift sourcing from China to other suppliers. We therefore employed a model, described in Appendix A, that identifies the shifts that would occur from China to other sources of supply were the United States to impose tariffs on imports from China. The results are presented below. They show that, even after changes in sourcing, the proposed tariffs would have a substantial negative impact on American consumers of furniture and travel goods. Consumers would pay between $2.1 billion and $4.6 billion additional for furniture and between $578 million and $1.2 billion additional for travel goods.

Furniture

The products targeted for tariffs include both finished furniture and parts assembled into finished furniture in the United States by manufacturers or retailers.<sup>4</sup> Imposition of the tariffs causes the costs of imported furniture and parts from China to rise by nearly 8 percent (from 10 percent tariffs) to over 23 percent (from 25 percent tariffs). This in turn shifts some sourcing of goods from China to other countries and U.S. producers, whose goods are often more expensive than current Chinese suppliers. U.S. production increases marginally (up 0.8 percent to 1.2 percent, respectively); the prices of U.S.-made furniture also increase as U.S. producers respond to the increase in demand (up 1 percent to 2.1 percent).

	10% Tariffs	25% Tariffs
Change in Cost of Chinese Imports	+7.8%	+23.4%
Change in Chinese Production	-4.9%	-9.0%
Change in U.S. Production	+0.8%	+1.2%
Change in Cost of U.S.-Produced Furniture	+1.0%	+2.1%
Change in Prices to U.S. Consumers	+2.0%	+4.3%
Impact on Consumption	-4.0%	-8.2%
Higher Prices Paid by Consumers	$2.1 bill.	$4.6 bill.
Net Loss to U.S. Economy	$23.5 mill.	$1.0 bill.

<sup>4</sup> The HTS items subject to this analysis are: 7616.99; 8302.41, .50; 8418.91; 9401.30, .40, .52, .53, .59, .61, .69, .71, .79, .80, .90; 9403.10, .20, .30, .40, .50, .60, .70, .82, .83, .89, .90; 9404.10, .21, .29 (Note: we exclude HTS8 products within those codes that are classified in other industries, such as parts for auto seats, which are classified as automotive parts).

On average, prices for furniture overall – including both Chinese-made and U.S.-made products – increase 2 percent to 4.3 percent, and consumers cut back on purchases, by 4 percent to 8.2 percent. Higher prices for what they do purchase takes $2.1 billion to $4.6 billion out of their pockets— money they would have had available to spend on other goods and services. Even considering benefits for U.S. producers and the revenue tariffs would provide to the U.S. Treasury, the losses incurred by consumers and the impact on the economy generally from inefficiencies mean that the result of the tariffs is a net negative: a loss of $23.5 million to $1 billion for every year the tariffs are in effect.

Travel Goods

“Travel goods” generally refer to products like backpacks, handbags, luggage, wallets, phone cases, and totes. This product category encompasses items in Harmonized Tariff Schedule 4202, nearly all of which are on the list of proposed 10 percent or 25 percent tariffs. Imposition of the tariffs causes the costs of imported travel goods from China to rise by 9.1 percent (from 10 percent tariffs) to 23 percent (from 25 percent tariffs). This in turn shifts some sourcing of goods from China to other countries and U.S. producers, whose goods are often more expensive than current Chinese suppliers. U.S. production increases (1.5 percent to 3.2 percent, respectively); the prices of U.S.-made travel goods also increase as U.S. producers respond to the increase in demand (up 2 percent to 4.3 percent).

	10% Tariffs	25% Tariffs
Change in Cost of Chinese Imports	+9.1%	+23.0%
Change in Chinese Production	-2.2%	-4.0%
Change in U.S. Production	+1.5%	+3.2%
Change in Cost of U.S.-Made Goods	+2.0%	+4.3%
Change in Prices to U.S. Consumers	+4.8%	+9.9%
Impact on Consumption	-9.2%	-17.7%
Higher prices paid by consumers	$578.2 mill.	$1.2 bill.
Net Loss to U.S. Economy	$130.4 mill.	$650.7 mill.

Overall, U.S. consumers reduce purchases and pay more for what they do buy. On average, travel goods prices – including both Chinese-made and U.S.-made products – increase 4.8 percent to 9.9 percent, and consumers cut back significantly on these price-sensitive purchases, by 9.2 percent to 17.7 percent. Higher prices for what they do purchase takes $578 million to $1.2 billion out of their pockets— money they would have otherwise had available to spend on other goods and services. Even considering benefits for U.S. producers and the revenues tariffs would provide to the U.S. Treasury, the losses incurred by consumers and impact on the economy generally from inefficiencies mean the result of the tariffs is a net negative: a loss of $130.4 million to $650.7 million for every year the tariffs are in effect.

Appendix A Methodology

We employed a modeling strategy for industry-focused globally-linked partial equilibrium analysis of tariff policy.

Based on the Harmonized Tariff Schedule (HTS) items identified in the Federal Register notice as proposed for tariffs of 10 percent, or 25 percent, when imported from China, we have built a set of product-specific models based on the “global simulation model” framework (GSIM). Francois and Hall (2007) developed GSIM to allow detailed analysis of tariff scenarios across individual products and potentially all major trading countries and blocks. The World Bank and the United Nations adopted the GSIM framework, integrating it into the joint World Bank-UNCTAD trade data portal known as the “World Integrated Trade Solution,” or WITS (see <http://wits.worldbank.org/wits/>).<sup>5</sup> The basic framework employed here can be implemented with a spreadsheet-based interface. We should stress that, in implementation, this set of models is structurally consistent with the recent class of Eaton-Kortum based structural trade models (see Bekkers et al, 2015; Costinot and Rodriguez-Clare, 2014 for example).

The basic approach involves specifying global supply and demand for each set of goods produced by a particular country as the sum of individual (national) sources of supply and demand. This is done for goods produced in all regions in the model. We are then able to reduce the solution set of the model to those global prices that clear global markets. Once we have a global set of equilibrium prices, we can obtain national results (changes in prices and quantities). Based on price and quantity changes, we in turn obtain estimates of changes in production, trade, consumer and producer surplus, and real national income that result from the imposition of tariffs on imports from China. Within this context, we work with a non-linear representation of import demand, combined with generic export-supply equations (see Francois and Hall 2007).

Trade data and tariffs are from “World Integrated Trade Solution,” or WITS (see <http://wits.worldbank.org/wits/>) and the U.S. Census Bureau.

<sup>5</sup> Another application, the MRPE model, is a specialized, scalable extension of the GSIM framework for strategic trade policy assessments at the detailed sector level, developed for the European Commission.

Production data (domestic sales) are from country input/output tables and from the Census Bureau's Annual Survey of Manufacturers. The latest data from that resource is 2016, so all import data are also for 2016.

Trade elasticities are from the Global Trade Analysis Project (GTAP).
